Meet with the Co-Editors and Executive Board of the New Journal, Rhetoric, Politics & Culture
to discuss:

What are the purposes of rhetoric/communication/composition scholarship today? What could and should we be doing in our communities, classrooms, and scholarship? What do we need to be writing and talking about right now?

What does a socially transformative journal and publishing platform look like and do today?

How do we keep the activist origins of this journal alive in what, who, how, and why we publish?

Given that so many of us are aligned with critical, interdisciplinary fields related to marginalized communities like Africana, Ethnic, Asian American, Latinx, Indigenous, Gender, and Sexuality Studies, what is our role when so many of these spaces are being targeted under new austerity regimes following COVID-19?

... and YOUR questions, ideas, and issues!

RPC Co-Editors: Carmen Kynard and Bryan McCann

RPC Executive Board: Karma Chávez, Andre Johnson, Vani Kannan, Khirsten Scott, Jacqueline Jones Royster, and Anjali Vats
